RESOURCES

TraceLink Q&A: What Does Enforcement Discretion Mean for Your Saleable Returns Strategy?

On September 24, the FDA announced enforcement discretion for the saleable returns verification requirement for wholesalers over concerns about industry readiness. As your trusted partner, TraceLink continues to stand firm in our commitment to support our customers' saleable returns verification strategy, and our belief that the industry must continue to move forward with their saleable returns verification projects.

In this on-demand webinar, TraceLink's Brian Daleiden, VP of Industry Marketing; Dan Walles, General Manager, Track & Trace; and Caitlin Czuluda, Director of TraceLink's Center of Excellence, will field all of your saleable returns and enforcement discretion questions, including:

- What does enforcement discretion mean for manufacturers?
- Why is it important to demonstrate that you are making a best effort to comply with the law?
- How much time will we need for planning, implementation, and interoperability testing?
- Why should companies continue to move forward to close this vulnerability in the supply chain?

© TraceLink Inc. 2009 - 2025 All Rights Reserved

- And more

Featured WebinarsGlobal Track & TraceRegulatory/Compliance, SerializationUnited States
Register To Watch
Watch Now
Register To Watch

Thank you! You'll receive an email with details on how to watch. Enjoy the webinar.

© TraceLink Inc. 2009 - 2025 All Rights Reserved