Dahod, president and CEO at TraceLink. “By adopting a hybrid working model, we can provide permanent, flexible work options for our employees, and are no longer bound by geographic barriers, providing the ability to unlock new talent and growth opportunities in virtually any part of the world.”

To accommodate its growing corporate headquarters in Massachusetts, TraceLink is moving to a new building located at 200 Ballardvale Street in Wilmington, just two miles away from its current location. Owned by development company Griffith Properties, the location will be designed to accommodate TraceLink’s new hybrid work model, including dedicated workspaces for onsite and flexible remote employees, with additional space for the Company’s anticipated growth.

TraceLink has also doubled the size of its Pune, India location, acquiring additional square footage for more workspaces, meeting rooms and collaborative environments that are better suited to the current working environment. TraceLink employee growth in India has increased by 100 percent over the past 12 months.

TraceLink has six locations around the world, with its corporate headquarters in Massachusetts, and additional offices in Rochester, New York; Uxbridge, England; Mumbai, India; Pune, India; and Singapore.
