DSCSA 2023 Requirements and the Capabilities You Need to Keep Up

Among 56% of manufacturers and distributors who responded to our poll at the webinar, keeping up with shifting requirements was cited as a top concern for their business going into 2023.

The final phase of DSCSA traceability requirements go into effect on November 27, 2023. But this deadline is just one milestone on a path of ongoing change—DSCSA requirements, standards, and partner needs will continue to evolve for some time to come.

The recent TraceLink webinar, "DSCSA 2023: Requirements, Necessary Capabilities, and Preventing Drug Shortages," dived into the ever-changing nature of DSCSA 2023 requirements.

The best way to address these challenges is by investing in TraceLink's DSCSA compliance solution. With Integrate Once, Interoperate with Everyone and our unique network architecture, you'll have all the capabilities needed to remain in compliance, even as requirements and Authorized Trading Partners evolve.

Beyond keeping up with evolving compliance requirements, attendees also noted other challenges like:

- Managing DSCSA exceptions
- Exchanging serialized transaction information
- Integrating with customers in an efficient and cost effective manner
- Processing data-intensive tractions at operational scale
- Optimizing recall execution across multiple partners
