FDA Reiterates November 2023 Deadline for DSCSA-Compliant Systems with 12-Month Stabilization Period

In new guidance from the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA), the organization announced a 12-month stabilization period to give trading partners more time to finalize the implementation of DSCSA-compliant systems and processes.

The FDA states that companies should “use the additional time to implement, troubleshoot, and mature their systems and processes while supporting the continued availability of products to patients.” The FDA strongly reiterated that the law has not changed and this guidance “should not be viewed as providing a justification for delaying efforts… to implement EDDS requirements.”
